ABOUT THE ARTIST

Maggie Hurley is most content with a paintbrush in her hand. She attended the Laguna College of Art and Design before finding her way to San Francisco and then on to the East Bay, which she now calls home. Her work spans a wide range of subjects, from precocious birds to dynamic seascapes. Her choice of medium seems to depend on the weather and the subject at hand. Sometimes she prefers the ease of watercolor, or the texture of oil. Sometimes she revels in getting her fingers thick with clay.

Her inspiration comes from the world around her. She is fascinated by the way light bounces off of skyscrapers and is equally enthralled by the views of clouds from airplane windows. Her work celebrates the wonder and whimsy in everyday things often taken for granted.
